Fred. Olsen Cruise Lines

Your Fitness to Travel

1. By booking with Fred. Olsen Cruise Lines, you are saying that you and any other person(s) covered by your booking are fit to travel. This statement is in every way emphasised in the Terms and Conditions (which you have agreed to), where it is made clear that you must disclose all MATERIAL FACTS to us. A material fact is, of course, something which you know (but which we do not) which may affect our ability to allow you on board. One important example concerns any special assistance you might need (e.g. mobility problems or your need to bring your own medical equipment/supplies on board). You must tell us about these matters when booking. If you arrive at the vessel without having obtained our consent beforehand, we may be forced to refuse to allow you on board at the last moment.

2. If you have any doubts about your fitness to travel, then it is your responsibility to check with your own doctor.

3. Whilst we do offer basic medical assistance on board for unexpected medical problems, we cannot accept legal or financial responsibility for your health or fitness to travel.

4. And as our Terms and Conditions make clear, any such medical or nursing assistance which we render directly or through third parties is at our sole discretion but at your sole cost (including the fees of a ship's doctor and repatriation expenses). It is accordingly your responsibility to ensure that you are fully covered by travel insurance.
